

And justice for all? SC upholds guilty ruling on Abadilla 5

By Marlon Ranco

THE SUPREME COURT has affirmed the conviction and life sentence issued on the five men for the 1996 murder of Celso Abadilla Abadilla, an intelligence chief of the now-defunct Philippine Constabulary who joined over 100 for alleged torturing political prisoners during the Marcos regime in the 1970s.

Giving the failure of the accused to prove their alibi, the high court upheld the April 1, 2009, ruling of the Court of Appeals (CA) finding Joel de Jesus, Lito Lomang, Renato de Jesus,

Witness says lawyer advised Ampatuans not to admit guilt

By Philip C. Tabasa

IN THE AFTERMATH of the massacre of 57 people, brother turned against brother in the Ampatuan clan as the family faced multiple murder charges and pondered whose head should roll, a court was told yesterday.

Affidavit that he would be joined, Zaldy Ampatuan was prepared to tag his younger brother Aniel Ampatuan Jr. as the man responsible for the worst political violence in the nation's history, said former law partner Lito Lomang.

Conceding his testimony before Judge Josefin Salda Reyes at Camp Bagong Diwa in Marikina, Salda testified that lawyer Rogelio Barrios advised Zaldy, then governor of the Ilocos Norte Region in Marikina (ARMM), not to admit anything and leave the matter to the lawyers.

Last week, Salda testified that Ampatuan Jr., the mayor of Davao Unsay, knew and Unsay, carried out the family decision to wangle on Nov. 23, 2009, a convey of a political ritual contesting the gubernatorial seat in Maguindanao in the May elections.

Salda said the family patriarch, former Gov. Aniel Ampatuan Sr., gave the order to kill relatives and supporters of Vice Maguindanao, along with at least 30 media workers.

The group was on route to file the certificate of candidacy of Maguindanao, who had lost his wife and sisters, thinking they would not be harmed. Maguindanao subsequently was an Maguindanao governor.

and Jocelyn R. Uy

A GROUP of security officials known as the "Three Kings" has taken over the collection of gross gaming from "jueteng" operations under the Aquino administration, according to a list of gambling lords and their protectors prepared by a justice police official.

Jueteng, an illegal numbers racket patronized by the poor, generates an estimated P17.5 billion in gross sales a year.

Each member of the "Three Kings" receives between P5 million and P8 million in monthly payoffs, according to the list.

Sandra Cae, a jueteng whistleblower, yesterday said the list was subsequently verified by Kinsolving Bayan Lupon as Jueteng of retired Archbishop Oscar Luis.

The list also obtained a copy of the document, which listed a total of 12 personalities that included two governors, two retired chief superintendents and a retired police officer superintendent.

ANTIDENGUE DRIVE DOST develops mosquito trap

By Christine G. Arendele

PROMPTED by persistent reports of dengue virus nationwide, the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) has developed a mosquito trap that checks the spread of the virus and may soon become available next month.

The trap has successfully passed laboratory tests and will be subjected to field tests in 500 households in Quezon City and 500 households in Marikina City next week, Science Secretary Mario Montoya said at a press briefing in Manila calling yesterday.

"If we get positive results which we expect, we can roll these out all over (the country)," Montoya said. "We have to be careful that what we're claiming is really validated, including implementation details."

'Maaaaaam, may I go home'

IT'S NOT uncommon to hear people say "May I go home, Ma'am" in public schools, especially in Metro Manila.

Good thing their homes are just a walking distance away.

Whether nature calls, students of Dagupan Barrio National High School in Calapan City, for instance, would have to leave class and walk home to get relief.

Such is school life at the public high school, where at least 5,000

A Better Future

IN THE SPIRIT OF PEACE AND RECONCILIATION...

We issue this appeal to His Excellency PRESIDENT BENIGNO "PNOy" S. AQUINO III, to GRANT AMNESTY to the active and former officers and enlisted personnel of the Armed Forces of the Philippines who stood against the previous administration.

Their battle cry – CHANGE – has coalesced into the bigger struggle of millions of other patriotic and freedom-loving Filipinos: the fight against corruption, electoral fraud and other evils of bad governance.

This appeal is not to encourage impunity for their actions in the Oakwood incident of 2003; in the Marine standoff of 2006; nor for those in The Peninsula Manila siege of November 2007; and several other related incidents. These soldiers have already suffered the consequences of their actions. They have paid their dues. We believe that it is the time for them to rebuild their lives, and in the process, contribute to rebuilding this nation.

For some time now, previous administrations have pursued acts of reconciliation with avowed enemies of the State like the CPP/NPA/NDF, the MNLF, and the MILF. It would only be just if the same conciliatory approach is extended to the very same soldiers who have devoted most of their lives in the service of our country and people.

President Noy, we believe that GRANTING AMNESTY to these soldiers is not only acceptable, but also timely in view of the Government's agenda of peace and reconciliation.

As we join together in this call, we hereby affix our signatures:

Tripartite talks on judiciary's budget sought

By Michaela Ullrich

MANILA (PNA) Rep. Michaela Ullrich is pressing President Benigno Aquino III to call for the convening of the Judicial Executive Legislative Tripartite (JELTAC) to quickly address the issue of a judicial budget.

The proposal to convene the tripartite body came amid a threat by some judges to go on strike until a proper judicial budget is approved.

Ullrich said the judiciary is only P4.3 billion, against the P27.1 billion in the budget.

"Serious attempts to develop out the judiciary's budget in 2011 within a tripartite body would be a step towards the qualified court officials granting the budget appropriations," Ullrich said.

Ullrich said the budget secretary of former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, re-elected as the judiciary's budget was raised since after the Palace, Supreme Court and congressional leaders addressed the judiciary's request for more funds to increase JELTAC meetings.

Judicial budget increase
During the Arroyo administration, the then President Macapagal-Arroyo and Chief Justice Reyesman Arroyo attended JELTAC meetings with House and Senate leaders, which resulted in the increase of the judicial budget in 2009 and 2010, according to Ullrich.

"In a month, upon the judiciary's initiative, the judicial budget's budget was raised by P500 million for fiscal year 2009 and by P520 million for 2010," Ullrich said.

He said the request by the Chief Justice for a higher budget for a tripartite body was submitted to both legislative chambers before the House could vote on the general appropriations bill.

He said this was done by submitting to Congress what is a duly collected to create legal, desirable changes to the proposed budget.

"The result was that the judiciary was not treated as a congressional outgroup but as part of the original budget process," Ullrich said.

Breaking the Impasse

He suggested that the same approach be used in formulating the present impasse between the House and the Senate.

Ullrich said the tripartite approach would ensure that "the judiciary's budget is not only submitted, with the demands supported by evidence of need."

Ullrich has called on President Aquino to convene the JELTAC to mend the judicial system and improve the judiciary.

"Without an effective and modernized system of justice, we will never achieve a healthy society for the benefit of all," he said. Meanwhile, Rep. John de Jesus yesterday cautioned the Aquino against meeting with Chief Justice Renato Corona to discuss the disbursement of the judicial funds over the judiciary's budget.

"It does not add to the dignity of the judiciary that the President disburse the judiciary's budget on his own," he said.

Catholic schools' job is to produce saints—Bishop Soc

By Di Pa

THE MISSION of a good Catholic school is not the capacity to produce scientists, politicians or businessmen, Archbishop Socorro Villegas reminded the new president and new chancellor of De La Salle University (DLSU) Tuesday.

But he said, "It is the ability to create saints."

Quoting a call order by DLSU's new president, Rev. Ignacio E. Lapaga, and its new chancellor, Rev. Renato E. Lapaga, who were formally installed Tuesday night.

"The duty of a Catholic school is not to produce scientists... it is to produce leaders in society," Villegas said during the Mass celebrated on how before Lapaga's and Lapaga's installation at the Most Holy Sacrament Chapel on the University's Tala campus.

"Let La Salle produce not just good education. Let La Salle produce not just good public officials. Let La Salle produce saints," Villegas told the two, who assumed the posts named by Rev. Antonio Lachica, vice-chancellor.

"Today's youth need to be reminded that they have souls," he said in a message that they have a spiritual life.

Lapaga and Lapaga were appointed by the 11th president and third chancellor, respectively, of DLSU, which will celebrate its centennial in June 2011.

Chief Justice Renato Corona administered the oath of office to the two in the ceremony attended by members of the DLSU's Board of Trustees, faculty, personnel and students.

An education graduate, Lapaga has over 30 years of administrative experience in the university system.

Lapaga finished philosophy at the Ateneo De Manila University and took his doctorate degree in Educational Leadership and Management at DLSU.

For Lapaga, Villegas' call was not necessarily an impossible task.

"It's only a tall order when people think that to be a saint means to be perfect," he said reporters after the ceremony.

"But saints are not perfect. They also commit sins," Lapaga said. When disciplined saints from ordinary citizens is that they are able to change themselves for the better and to give more of themselves to society, he said.

Lapaga said he would also commit to Lapaga's efforts to make the university less elitist and more accessible to poorer segments of the population. Villegas and Lapaga discussed at 10:30 am youth over P50,000 per semester in a "tuition-free" classroom, said Lapaga.

"The goal is to have 20 percent of the student population supported by full scholarship. Currently it stands at 15-16 percent," he said. This would mean that DLSU would be able to give more commitment to serving the Filipino people.

Plane baby's mother now in NBI custody

By Marlon Barro

THE NATIONAL Bureau of Investigation (NBI) yesterday took into custody a woman who reportedly abducted her newborn son in a truck this inside the territory of a truck for plane over the weekend.

According to NBI director Marlon Barro, the woman was "picked up" by NBI agents from her home in Ispayas in northern Luzon.

Barro refused to name the woman as the NBI was still investigating the recovery of baby George Francis.

"It was confirmed that our regional office has picked her up in Ispayas. She was confirmed by her ability to provide her own ID card."

Barro said yesterday, however, the woman would undergo psychiatric evaluation to determine her mental and emotional condition.

DON'T LET IT HAPPEN TO YOU!

On 29 January 2009, our company, Calamba Shine! Industry Philippines Corporation, was raided by operatives of the Philippine National Police, Anti-Fraud and Commercial Crimes Division of the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (PNP-A/CCD-CIDG) for using pirated software in our business operations.

By using unlicensed software, we have placed our company at risk of legal action, business losses and humiliation!

We would like to apologize to the manufacturer of the software programs that we used without proper license for any harm and damage we may have caused. We would also like to apologize to all our customers for our wrongdoing.

STOP THIS IRRESPONSIBLE BEHAVIOR NOW!

Intellectual Property Rights (IPR) must be respected. We urge all company officers and business owners to adhere to the IPR laws by proactively ensuring that there is no pirated or unlicensed software on your premises. Software piracy hurts the Philippines' local software industry. It causes loss of thousands of local jobs, millions in local wages, investments in new technologies, as well as tax revenues for the Philippine government.

Unfortunately, it is now through our irresponsible actions that we have learned the penalty and consequences of using pirated and unlicensed software.

We support all enforcement actions of the Philippine Anti-Piracy Team (PAPT) to curb software piracy. We encourage businesses to learn from our mistakes and stop this irresponsible behavior now.

Report piracy to the PAPT. Call the PAPT Secretariat at (02) 692-9916 or visit www.papt.org.ph.

APPROXIMATELY within one to two hours of the test, it is estimated that the North Korea nuclear test caused the release of the 1963.11 tonne of smoke. North Korea presented the test results to the South Korean, American and Japanese forces in a book for the 60th anniversary of the signing of the Korean Armistice Agreement.

No quick progress seen in Korea talks

BEIJING—A special US envoy arrived in Beijing on Wednesday for talks on restarting stalled negotiations on North Korea's nuclear disarmament, although he said no quick breakthrough seems likely.

North Korea's refusal to let the discussion table last year to prevent international criticism of its long-range missile launch program for fear of the talks being disrupted after the signing of a South Korea treaty to Seoul.

Chinese, South Korean and American officials have called on North Korea to advance its responsibility for the country's missile and nuclear disarmament in return for the talks.

"There is no reason to expect there is going to be a burst of diplomatic activity in the next few weeks," American Special Representative for North Korea Affairs Stephen Brown said.

He said the talks are "a long-term process" and it is "a good idea to take some time."

Brown's trip to Beijing came as North Korea's ambassador to Washington announced that South Korea, American and Australian forces of the border that caused the war of the 1950s.

Ships, planes and missiles from the three countries marked the 60th anniversary of the signing of the Korean Armistice Agreement, which ended the war.

The signing of the agreement was a landmark in the history of the Korean Peninsula, which has been divided into North and South Korea since 1948.

BIR misses Aug. target

But P79.1-B inflow 17% more than '09 take

By Karen W. Domingo

THE BUREAU OF Internal Revenue under the new administration instead, its monthly collection target in August, with inflow reaching P79.1 billion or 11.9 percent short of the goal.

However, preliminary data that the BIR released yesterday also show that overall tax collection target in August, with inflow reaching P79.1 billion or 11.9 percent short of the goal.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Eric S. Domingo said August growth was the first year-over-year improvement since April 2009, when collections expanded by 23 percent.

August collections put the year to date right month-to-date January at P546.4 billion or 62.3 percent of the full-year target of P876.6 billion.

The annual revenue target of P876.6 billion or P87.6 billion from the P500.6 billion added to the date period of 2013.

However, the BIR's collection as of August is P71.1 billion or 11.9 percent short of the goal for the period.

Domingo said that for the BIR to attain the annual target, tax collections must grow by 15 percent for the entire year. "While meeting the BIR's original target of P79.1 billion is achievable, we will still strive and continue to do our best to meet the revised target of P80.6 billion by year-end," he said.

The additional income is meant to offset the effects on the government's finances of the lack of progress in efforts to privatize state-owned assets.

In 2009 and again this year, the government failed to raise P30 billion from the privatization of the Food Terminal Inc. property in Taguig City. P500.6 billion from the privatization of the Food Terminal Inc. property in Taguig City, P500.6 billion from the privatization of the Food Terminal Inc. property in Taguig City.

"What adds to our belief that our performance is steadily improving is the fact that all the taxes collected for the month of August is a pretty good result of 19800, which is monthly target," Domingo said.

"None of the collection had come yet from single large payments from associations and individuals," he added.

Domingo said that since declining to 1.6 percent year-over-year in June 2010, the BIR's tax collection from donors nearly improved, growing by 18.9 percent in July from 17.03 percent in August.

Anti-Corruption Workshop for Small-and Medium-Size Enterprise

To promote integrity and accountability in business, the Hills Program of the Asian Institute of Management will be conducting workshops for owners and managers of SMEs. Each workshop will provide:

- Insights on how to take an ethical approach to business as a management tool.
- Practical measures for dealing with corruption scenarios in day-to-day business operations.
- Guidance on implementing systems and controls for preventing unethical behavior by employees; and
- Tools for developing ethics training programs for employees.

The workshop for SMEs in Metro Manila will be offered at AIM from 9 am to 1:30 pm on three dates: 6 October, 20 October and 17 November.

Space is limited. If interested in applying to attend a workshop, please call Ms. Ria Piscano at 752 1257 or 882 4011, extension 2017 or send an e-mail to rcristiancenter@aim.edu. Registration is free.

SMC raises stake in power, to put up 150-MW plant

By Dora C. Butal

SMC (SMC) has signed a power purchase agreement (PPA) with the state-owned power utility to put up a 150-MW power plant in the state.

Being at the end of the power grid, the state has to subsidize the cost of power. The PPA is a 15-year agreement to put up a 150-MW power plant in the state.

In an interview, SMC president Ramon Ang said the installation of additional power generating capacity in Luzon State would help level electricity prices and allow the state to develop more power plants in the province.

During the SMC's meeting, Ang said an LNG-fired power plant with an initial capacity of 150 megawatts would be feasible in Luzon.

He said the companies, however, had yet to identify the specific location for the new or expanded project, which will benefit from the LNG import terminal to be built in Batangas.

Being at the end of the power grid, the state has to subsidize the cost of power. The PPA is a 15-year agreement to put up a 150-MW power plant in the state.

Southwest Power Corp. operates a wind farm in the town of Bangad that can generate up to 15 MW, but it accounts for just a third of the power requirements of Luzon State.

San Miguel, through its subsidiary San Miguel Energy Corp., earlier told the Philippine Stock Exchange it was considering to invest up to $1 billion to construct a 150-MW power plant with a total capacity of 1,500 MW across the country, about half of which was to be put up between 2013 and 2015.

In an interview, the plan for a gas-fired power plant in the state was approved by the board of directors of SMC.

The companies across the power grid to eventually make up a quarter of the group's revenue.

In the first semester, its existing 2,000-

MW power generating portfolio contributed P14.1 billion in revenue or about 12 percent of group-wide profit.

Ang said SMC's share had a lot of potential to develop power industries.

On a personal capacity, Ang is taking over a license to build the Luzon State Wind Farm, and joining up a consortium to build a power plant in partnership with Northern Cement Corp. of San Miguel chair Eduardo Cuyayan.

He said the proposed power plant would require an initial investment of at least $1.5 billion to be able to produce one million tons of cement per year, initially catering to domestic construction requirements.

He said the company could be potentially required to invest $1.5 billion, potentially requiring $1.5 billion to be able to produce one million tons of cement per year, initially catering to domestic construction requirements.

Ang said he was on talks and hoping to close a deal with the government of the state for the use of the land for the plant.

He said construction of the proposed power plant could start by December or January, he said.

Nexsun eyes stake in RP mining sector

By Dora C. Butal

A U.S.-based green energy firm has expressed interest in investing in the country's renewable sector, which has been identified as one of the priority industries of the Aquino administration.

In a statement, Nexsun Corp., which is developing in mineral exploration and development worldwide, said it was encouraged by the determination of the new government to enhance the investment climate in the Philippines.

Nexsun recently invested in four local mining companies, namely: (1) Nexsun Mining, (2) Nexsun Mining, (3) Nexsun Mining, and (4) Nexsun Mining.

It recently appointed James Garcia president of all four mining companies.

The stated to invest in mineral exploration and development worldwide, said it was encouraged by the determination of the new government to enhance the investment climate in the Philippines.

It said Nexsun has expertise in developing and operating green energy businesses including, but not limited to, wind, solar, hydro, geothermal, biomass, and other renewable resources.

It has a portfolio of global investments in the United States and is also engaged in the fields of exploration, development, and mining of mineral resources.

The Aquino administration hopes to attract $10 billion worth of new investments in the mining sector over the next three years.

Commodity investments in the sector have reached only around $2.5 billion since 2006.

Mining has been rapidly expanding since the government enacted the Investment Law in the Philippines in 2006.

The government announced that mineral production in the Philippines grew a record 10 percent year-over-year in the second quarter of 2013, spurred by higher demand and a recovering global economy.

More investments seen for semiconductor sector

By Miguel L. Lim

THE GLOBAL semiconductor industry expects investment in capacity to reach its highest level in the next few years, with capital equipment spending now reaching $25.9 billion, more than double last year's $12.6 billion.

According to a recent survey from Gartner Inc., growth from this year to next would be a modest 4.9 percent, but only because 2010's increased spending growth would. After capital equipment spending is in full effect, growth is expected to be 10.1 percent.

Also, 2009 was considered a slump year for the industry, with most players cutting or pulling out with their existing equipment, as semiconductor demand significantly slowed due to the global economic downturn.

Capital equipment spending would increase 10.1 percent to $27.7 billion.

Capital spending to reach $36.9B in 2010, Gartner says from the $25.9 billion recorded last year.

Since 2009 proved to be the year of recovery, not the global economy, Gartner's research shows that semiconductor equipment spending should grow by a similar rate to which companies should produce.

From 2010 to 2011, Gartner said total capital spending, including equipment, should grow by a slower 15.1 percent to $35.0 billion.

"Capital expenditures (this year) is about 90 percent due to strong spending by the leading and logic segments, along with a technology upgrade for the memory market. In 2011, capital spending is expected to grow 16 percent. Because a clearing economy will negatively impact electronics and consumer durables sales," he said in a statement posted on the Gartner website.

For this reason, he said equipment manufacturers should plan for a "robust 2011," with equipment production to focus more on capacity rather than technology.

The total equipment drive cycle would start in late 2012, he said, due mainly to momentum for memory manufacturing, which would then result in better equipment capacity.

stronger year over but the semiconductor equipment market, which will be a slow recovery from the recent year.

Growth will continue through 2012 as companies move from technology buys to capacity programs," he said.

Clean energy seen with new technology

By Daniel Lucan

THE AQUINO administration is being urged to invest in new technology that would allow the country to produce clean energy and storage.

According to think tank Foreign Law and Policy Institute, the private sector can play a role in the development of clean energy and storage.

Having CCS technology will stimulate the need for clean energy and storage, which is one of the cheapest energy sources available.

CCS involves three main steps: (1) capturing and separating carbon dioxide from large facilities and industries that produce fossil fuels and biomass such as power plants and industrial facilities; (2) compressing and storing the captured carbon dioxide in liquid or supercritical states; and (3) storing carbon dioxide in appropriate reservoirs such as geological formations.

Before this can be done, however, the government must first come up with a legal and regulatory framework to ensure carbon dioxide emissions can be sold or captured by businesses or individuals on the part of investors who are concerned over the commercial competitiveness, environmental safety and public acceptance of these facilities, said Foreign Solutions in its policy paper.

The think tank, headed by former Aquino Secretary Alberto Aguirre, said creating a regulatory framework to ensure carbon dioxide emissions can be sold or captured by businesses or individuals on the part of investors who are concerned over the commercial competitiveness, environmental safety and public acceptance of these facilities, said Foreign Solutions in its policy paper.

Bacon-wrapped 'camaron rebosado'

By Rangle Daga Reyes

COMplete a quick and easy meal with this Bacon-wrapped Camaron Rebosado. Much of the preparation for this dish can be done in advance, so you can serve it on short notice.

Camaron Rebosado is a yummy and affordable way to cook prawns. A different twist is the bacon wrapped around the soft body, then served with egg and rice mixture, making it crisp in every bite. It's gradually gaining in popularity.

"I don't even eat the bacon," says chef Arvin Rodriguez, kitchen manager of The Red Crab Japanese House (1504 15th Bldg. cor. Santa Delgado, Tondo, Manila, QC, tel. 4124322 and 3748456). "It's good to keep the day longer because they become crispy during frying."

Don't overcook the prawns too or you turn them dry and rubbery. But, you can prepare in advance the rebozado (batter) and keep them in a plastic bag and store them in the freezer for several days or even months. Simply thaw them before cooking.

It's best to remove the heads and shells of the prawns, leaving the tails on to make flipping in the batter easier.

Ingredients:
4 prawns, cleaned
4 strips bacon
2 whole eggs
1 + 1/2 cups
2-4 (big) pieces
Salt and pepper to taste
Cooking oil for deep-frying

Stars about to go hungry

NOT NOTHING. Dooommmmm!

So just the basic cry of children looking their vision to the "12-hour Hunger" campaign of World Vision, a global youth movement against hunger and poverty.

The campaign challenges the youth to raise money to feed hungry children. A symbolic fast happens on Nov. 16, at 9 a.m. at the Ming Y Arena in San Juan.

For 12 hours, instead of eating, the participants will donate money, sweat, tears, inspiring videos, conduct prayers, games and talent showcases. World Vision celebrity supporters will present a message.

STARS FOR OTHERS

"What's 12 hours without food if we can help save a child's life," said singer-actress Milla Lio, WV Ambassador for the Youth. Milla recently visited a slum area in Manila City, where she witnessed how children dug out garbage cans for scrap to make a little money for their families.

"Definitely my eyes have been opened to the reality of child labor," said Milla. "We all have an opportunity to create change in our own little way—and before you know it, you can see all of humanity has already changed the world."

Gagay Clark, the star "Hawaii" as a "young professional" in the music industry, participated among the most privileged youth. He said the campaign should be a chance for them to "feel the suffering of the poor, even for 12 hours, just once in their lives."

Other celebrities who have rolled behind the cause are entrepreneurs Christie Ballo-Fernandez, dancer-actor Sam Concepcion, model-actress Shara Soriano and singer-actress Janella Salvador.

To register, dial 8-10-AM-10 (8-106440), log on to www.worldvision.org.ph/hunger or visit the World Vision Hunger Handbook.
